The Care Team at Life Quality Homes of Denver

Medical research has shown that people with dementia often function better in a small, home-like setting. Life Quality Homes of Denver provides just this type of specialized care.

Recognition to daily activities of previous lifestyles enhances and encourages normalcy of life. Resident's are able to continue to participate in daily routines such as helping with laundry, baking, sitting down to breakfast with a cup of coffee and reviewing the daily paper, activities that they once found structure and comfort in. Resident's can find comfort by enjoying their personal belongings that decorate their room to stimulate the memory of home.

This type of home setting is also inviting and comforting for the family. Families are able to join their loved one in a comfortable setting to enjoy a birthday party, holiday feast, or a daily craft or activity. The home environment is not only recognizable to the resident but can also take family members back to "the way mom/dad used to be while at home." Life Quality Homes of Denver provides this reminiscent type of care.
